Allen Jack+Cottier Promotions Announced

Sydney, 8 September 2010

Spring has brought some changes to Allen Jack+Cottier (AJ+C), with six dedicated team members receiving promotions in recognition of their contribution to the company's ongoing success.

Daniel Staebe has been promoted to the role of Director. With experience spanning more than two decades, Daniel has worked extensively on several of the practice's award-winning public building and residential apartment developments.

As an integral part of the CEO Forum, Daniel uses his strong people management skills to act as a mentor and support person to many staff members.

Two team members have been promoted to the role of Senior Associate – Michael Rogers and Pip Bowling.

Pip has worked on a range of large, multi-disciplinary infrastructure and commercial projects, and continues to use her solid project management skills on many of AJ+C's projects.

Michael has been with AJ+C since 1997, working on diverse residential and commercial projects across Sydney. Michael was instrumental in delivering the schools project last year, and assisted in running our award winning Pavilions on the Park project.

Brian Mariotti and Paul Huxtable have earned the new title of Associate.

Brian has a natural affinity towards people management & has proven himself on a variety of projects during his time at AJ+C.

Paul is a key member of the aged care team, and has strong technical knowledge which he used to deliver the social housing project in 2009/10.

Chris Taylor, who has successfully led the Edith Cowan University project - a significant achievement at a Consultant level – has been promoted to Senior Consultant.

The success of AJ+C is due to our talented staff. We congratulate and thank these valuable team members for their dedication and contribution to the practice.
